FOURSOME: Warmly received, Healy, Strekalovsky, Stanley and Bayles sing "Greensleeves" at last Sunday evening's CA Musicale.

Wide Variety in Program Highlights '59 CA Musicale

By EDWARD BAKER

The Christian Association Musicale succeeded more often than not in its avowed purpose, to entertain a responsive audience. Master of ceremonies Edwin Taylor '60 presided in a folksy, unassuming manner over a program which ranged from Mozart to rock and roll.

Keynoting the proceedings were the Discords, a female double quartet which sang old standards in close harmony.

Next on the agenda was Courtney Bird '63, who injected more than a fair share of low comedy and questionable taste with an imitation of Charlie Weaver.

The Sidetrackers

Following Bird was a rock-and-roll trio consisting of Rodney Roach '63 and Howard Brown '62 on guitars and Charles Hadenfeldt '63 on drums. For no apparent reason this group calls itself the Sidetrackers. Their music, although they seemed to be enjoying it, was for the most part uninteresting.

Far more fruitful was a series of Mozart clarinet duets played by David Klock '60 and Susan Riley '61. These brief, simply constructed pieces, reasonably well-played, proved a welcome change, which in retrospect seems to have altered the course of the show for the better.

Following the Mozartian duo came the Dissipated Eight (all seven of them). In an inevitable comparison the Eight is superior to its female counterpart, the Discords, if not in musicianship, then in its rapport with the audience. Their brilliant transcription of an old Scottist tune from bagpipe to a duet for paired noses was as whimsically received as it was offered. And if the Eight occasionally hit a klinker, nobody, least of all them, minded.

Warmly Received

Undoubtedly the most warmly received group of the evening was the folk-singing foursome of Vcevold Strekalovsky '60, Gilbert Stanley '62, Diane Bayles '61 and Sophie Healy '61. Accompanying themselves on guitar and banjo, they sang well-known folk songs, including "Greensleeves," for which Klock played the clarinet in lieu of a recorder, "Lonesome Traveller" and "Rock Island Line," the latter being reminiscent of an excellent version by professionals Odetta and Larry. After adding two encores, the group left the stage amidst calls for more.

Daniel Miner '62 proved himself to be the most assured, talented player of the night. His highly stylized modern jazz piano playing provided a sublime finish to a show which at times desperately needed finesse.

Debaters Face Pitt Tournament

A College debating team, accompanied by Frederick Bowman, director of debate, will leave tomorrow to participate in a cross-examination tournament at the University of Pittsburgh. This is the only tournament of its type on the east coast, Bowman said.

Presenting Middlebury's affirmative case will be James Shattuck '62 and William Muros '63. Speaking on the negative will be Mary Elizabeth Beach '62 and Charles Canterbury '63.

At the Wake Forest Invitational tournament Middlebury outscored Duke University and the University of Kentucky for its two victories out of fourteen contests. The 12 top debating teams in the east were selected to participate in the tournament, Bowman pointed out, terming it the "finest I've ever been to."

William and Mary took first place, followed by George Washington University in second place.

ALUMNI MEETING

The Middlebury College Alumni of the Boston area will hold a dinner at the Hotel Continental in Boston Tuesday. After the dinner and meeting, the entire group will attend the Middlebury-Tufts hockey game.

Mandatory Chapel Out at Holyoke

Trustees of Mount Holyoke College recently voted to abolish compulsory chapel in favor of a "voluntary system" leaving attendance "up to the individual student's conscience and reason."

In the statement of the trustees' committee to restudy the church requirement, Robert E. Barrett, Jr., chairman, outlined the requirements of the new system. He said, ". . .it shall be the responsibility of each student . . .to attend frequently either 1) the college services. . .or 2) comparable services of her choice."

In his statement Barrett also said, in addressing the Mount Holyoke students, "You do want to engage in a spiritual search, . but you want freedom of choice as to the ways to pursue that choice." He stressed the responsibility that attends the voluntary system.

College To Hear Josh White, Widely Hailed Folk Singer

Josh White, the first professional folk singer to perform at Middlebury in several years, will appear Jan. 8 in Mead Chapel. His appearance is being arranged by The Atwater Club.

White has been recording for 30 years. He toured Europe in 1950 as the protege of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who met him at a performance in the White House.

Starting as guide for blind Negro street singers in the cities of the South, White will appear at the Town Hall in New York Dec. 26.

The tickets for his Middlebury performance will be sold in advance for $1.50 a person.

IFC Sponsors Kids' Parties For Village

Middlebury fraternities will sponsor their traditional Christmas parties for children, under the auspices of Interfraternity Council, tomorrow from 3:30 to 5 p. m.

This year the arrangements were made through Miss Lane at the Community House, Miss Hogan of the elementary school and Sister Pauline of St. Mary's school.

The children, 102 second graders, will be divided into groups of approximately 11. Each child will be given a toy, or clothing and a toy. Two groups of exceptionally needy children will be entertained at Kappa Delta Rho and Phi Kappa Tau.

The expense of these parties is covered by donations received from fraternity men. The fraternity houses will also provide refreshments, a tree and a Santa Claus.

Gary Ardison, chairman of the IFC Christmas parties, reported, "It goes without saying that the fraternity men get just as big a bang out of this program as do the kids."

Scholarship Is Conceived

Plans to create a Rose Martin Memorial Scholarship were announced this week by John G. Bowker, dean of the faculty.

Whether to present the memorial as one complete scholarship or in stipulated amounts each year has not yet been decided.

Town and campus organizations are contributing to the fund. Panhellenic Council reported that each of the six sororities has donated a gift. Town groups participating include the Grange, the American Association of University Women and the Community Players. The last group presented the play "Sabrina Fair" last Saturday night for benefit of the memorial.

Dean Bowker voiced his hope that "this could be the beginning of community activity to provide funds for local people to attend Middlebury."

MUA Pushes Auto Safety

The Men's Undergraduate Association placed a wrecked car in front of the Student Union yesterday in an effort to focus student attention on automobile safety during Christmas vacation.

The action was taken as part of a safety campaign initiated by the MUA this year under the direction of Michael Closson '60. Before Thanksgiving recess the organization distributed among the fraternities pamphlets containing pictures of automobile accidents.

Richard Bartlett '60, president of MUA, promised that something would also be done before spring vacation. The "overall aim of the program is to eliminate fatal accidents involving Middlebury students."

HUNGARY: Susan Balough offers her views on Hungarian Revolution and her experiences since that time.

American Intervention Sought During Hungarian Strife

By RUTH GODDARD

The non-intervention of the United States in the Hungarian Revolution of 1956 was and still is a sore point with the Hungarians, Susan Balogh, '63, a Hungarian refugee, reports.

While Hungarians did not expect the U. S. to send troops, they did expect the same kind of action that this country took at Suez: that is, preventive action through the U. N.

If the U. N. had sent troops into the country during her three days of freedom, Russia would not have gone to war over Hungary, Susan believes. Because of the lack of action then, she does not think there is any hope of a future revolution in Hungary.

Susan, who has been in this country almost three years and speaks fluent English, was living in Budapest when the revolution broke out there in October, 1956. She participated in it by filling bottles with "Molotov Cocktails," building barricades and caring for the wounded.

During the three days that Hungary was free, it was as if "everyone loved everyone else." Collection boxes put up for the widows and orphans of the revolution were filled with coins. Although store windows were broken, the merchandise was not looted; only food was taken. The feeling in the air was "wonderful, unforgettable," she says. There was a holiday air about, and she went to six parties in those three days.

Family Evacuates

The Russians returned with tanks, troops and guns on Nov. 4. Stunned and unbelieving, Hungary was forced to submit. On Nov. 14 Susan and her sister were awakened by their parents and told to get ready to leave. Taking only sandwiches with them, they set out for the Austrian border. They walked for 14 hours, getting lost several times on the way.

ROTC and FEPC

The ROTC department has been doing its "homework."

Acutely aware of the effect the EPC proposal would have on ROTC, the department has surveyed its students to find their reactions. The results: the number of students who would take advanced ROTC as a fifth, no-credit course (as it would be under the proposed curriculum) is "25 percent of the normal expectation." In other words, enrollment in the advanced course would be one-quarter of what it now is. The prospect of such a drastic reduction necessitates full consideration of the proposal in relation to ROTC.

Several reasons motivate the department to oppose the EPC proposal.

1) The contract between the U. S. government and the College (which set up the ROTC program) states that it shall be part of the College's academic program and shall carry academic credits. Since the course would not receive academic credit in the proposed system, it would not be part of the academic program and the terms of the contract would be violated.

2) The Army might not consider it worthwhile to continue the Middlebury ROTC unit if so few completed the program and received commissions. If the unit stayed, a greatly reduced student officer corps would create certain functional difficulties; for example, how will the few student officers be able to drill a cadet corps which is as large as ever? At any rate, the feeling is that the ROTC program would never reach its optimum level of operation under the proposed system. As long as so great a number of students would be deterred from enrolling in a course that they feel is of benefit, the proposed system would be unfair.

3) The FEPC proposal would, in effect, result in a "double-standard graduation." The student taking advanced ROTC will have carried five courses in his junior and senior years but will graduate with the same number of credits as a student who took only four courses. This amounts to discrimination against the ROTC student whose greater work load would not receive equivalent credits.

As far as present rules and regulations are concerned, the above reasoning justifies opposition to the proposal. But there may be another point of view toward the position of ROTC and academic credits for it.

1) The content of the ROTC courses does not qualify them to be part of an academic program. Studies of U. S. military history and the national security program are exceptions, but otherwise, learning minute parts of numerous weapons, proper interval in column movements and computation of azimuths are not academic topics. In most cases, it is learning by rote with no stimulus and minimal, compulsory interest. The material admittedly is stereotyped; but unlike certain sciences which have the same problem, learning the necessary facts results in little addition to the logical facilities of the student. There is no "grand concept" (as in mathematics) which is the basis or result of ROTC studies. No contract, regardless of its legality, can make ROTC a viable part of an academic program. There is tacit recognition of this fact in the ROTC contracts of many other colleges which give no credit for the course.

2) Accepting the premise that ROTC is not part of the academic program, the EPC proposal would constitute it an extra, no-credit course. A course that is not academic should not receive academic credit. But the student who needs advanced ROTC for the pay it will give him still has his "credit" in his paycheck; the student who wants to be an officer rather than an enlisted man during the Army experience he must undergo still has his "credit" in the commission he receives at graduation. In this light, ROTC is both an investment and an on-campus job.

3)No mention has been made of the fact that the student who presently takes advanced ROTC is penalized since he must sacrifice an academic subject in his junior and senior years. Few students enroll in advanced ROTC for love of the subject matter; rather, they enroll for practical reasons. Even a very serious student may find the practical considerations outweigh the loss of an academic subject. It is very regrettable that his opportunity to take advantage of college courses which would be important in his career should be cut by ten percent.

In discussions of the EPC proposal, it is necessary that both sides of the ROTC coin be looked at; there are legal reasons why ROTC is justified in its opposition, but consideration must also be given to the question of what ROTC's position should be in the academic program.

Merry Christmas

You Think You Have Problems?

By HELEN GEYH

Should the Jolly Old Saint himself descend upon Middlebury this year, the results might prove catastrophic.

Transportation, in itself, poses quite a problem. In the first place, travel by sleigh does presuppose a little snow at least — something distinguished so far this year by its failure to appear in quantity. And even a jovial old soul like Santa might be a bit perturbed at having to extricate a three-ton sleigh from a foot of Middlebury mud.

Navigation Hazards

Then, too, Father Christmas tends to be just a trifle myopic, and navigation about our fair campus could be difficult. One shudders to think what would ensue should he meet with that newly-erected snow fence or with that ominous, yawning chasm gracing Gifford's doorstep.

Worst of all, the life of his gallant coursers would be placed in severest jeopardy. Some avid ROTC trainee, carried away by the intricacies of his M-1, might lose his head and take a pot-shot at Donder or Blitzen. Even the prospect of fresh venison could not compensate for such a loss!

Don't suppose that St. Nick's ordeal would end here. Imagine his consternation when faced with the dilemna of Painter's eight chimneys. The very necessity of a choice might make him neurotic for life! But, to consider the other extreme, what would he do in the case of the chimneyless Batts? If he tried to slip in unobtrusively through the front door he'd surely be nabbed in the attempt by some zealous girl on house duty who'd accuse him of not signing in — or out for that matter — or upbraid him for wearing that ridiculous red outfit around campus (Didn't he know Ugly Man Week was over?)

No Stockings

And if he did manage to slip through unobserved he'd probably find no stockings hung up with care. The reason? Why, the washing machine is broken again and there is, consequently, a dearth of stockings (clean ones as least.)

All things considered the precarious trip just wouldn't be worth old Santa's time and mental anguish. Besides, on the night before Christmas there wouldn't be a single Middlebury student here to greet him.

Letters to the Editor

Volkert Replies

To the Editor:

In response to The CAMPUS editorial concerning the production of "The Tempest" and related subjects, I would like to point out that the program of plays for this year was chosen with an eye to quality and variety. It was also designed to fit the intellectual and artistic environment of the College. It is assumed that this environment is interested in stimulating thought and creative endeavor even if some new materials and some challenge are involved in the process. We have an excellent theater and should try to do excellent plays in it. I do not believe that it is the editorial policy of The CAMPUS to discourage that attempt.

As to the plays, they are as unlike as any four plays could be, although they are related in their inclusion of more or less versification. They differ completely in theme, characterization, style and staging. They also offer a complete range of realistic and unrealistic dramatic roles to potential actors.

A college theater such as ours must always be sensitive to the tastes of its audiences and talent. No discernible pattern has been evident in either of these areas during the past few years. Just barely enough candidates appeared to try out for "She Stoops to Conquer," but this was also true of "Bus Stop" and "Teahouse of the August Moon." Also tryouts for "The Tempest" and the musical were almost equal in number. The total attendance at "She Stoops to Conquer" was very small, while that at "Bus Stop," "The Teahouse of the August Moon" and "The Tempest" was large in every case as it had been for "Hamlet" and "The Skin of Our Teeth" last year. None of these plays enjoyed a capacity audience for its run of three nights. Attendence at "Hamlet," incidentally, was less than that at "The Tempest."

If and when a pattern of talent and interest becomes clear, certainly the program of plays will reflect it. It should be remembered, however, that audience, talent and the relationship of the theater to the College are all relevant factors.

Untouched Points

To the Editor:

I find it very unfortunate that last week's editorial by one of the CAMPUS members left so many points untouched. As a representative of many drama enthusiasts, I would like to comment on some of these points.

Did the author ever consider the relative merits of attempting to produce "The Tempest" or "Blood Wedding" over "My Sister Eileen" or "The Teahouse of the August Moon"? What will the "cup and saucer" comedies teach us? "The Tempest" may not have been an outstanding or professional production, but it was still an enjoyable performance. One of the advantages of college drama is that it offers the opportunity for experimental theater, by presenting plays of all ages and types. It is hoped that the audience will appreciate the plays chosen by the department of drama as being worthwhile for those students interested in either the technical or literary aspects of the theatre. Obviously, we desire to please the College community and have their support. In addition, those people connected with each performance in any way learn more about the interpretation and philosophy of the author than they would in any other way.

The author is to be commended for the insight to be found in the comment, "One college generation may be endowed with performing talent. Another . . .(with) many enthusiasts." The suggestion is that we are now in a time of drama enthusiasts. Should we then not present plays due to this lack of talent (which, by the way, is not as bad as suggested.)? Furthermore, IF talent is lacking, should we not present productions which emphasize other elements of the theater — staging, lighting, costumes and music? Certainly "The Tempest" could be appreciated for these factors! I feel that the drama department should be praised for even attempting these more difficult productions.

Unworthy

To the Editor:

Briefly and bluntly the editorial in the last issue of your college weekly regarding the production of "The Tempest" and criticism of the department's choice is not worthy of a publication representative of the aims and aspirations of students in any educational institution.

To choose vehicles of dramatic expression that are measured to fit the "known" capacities of the participants is to defeat the faith that we have in the infinite and imaginative possibilities of the mind itself. The play, itself, does much to say just that in its implications.

My shock in reading your editorial is only tempered by the dismaying spirit of our time.

Just Wandering

By ANN JENKYNS

. . .Wandering around campus this week, we noted many Christmas doings. In our happy idealistic state, which always comes upon us at this time of year, it was pleasing to observe many people carrying on in the true giving spirit of the season.

Perhaps being out in the sticks does have its advantages after all. At least we are not distracted by neon lights ignited at Thanksgiving, hawking vendors yelling in the streets and the heavy commercial season of the cities.

CHRISTMAS COMES early here at Middlebury, and, thanks to some College groups, it is a real Christmas for many who are not as fortunate as others.

Women's Forum, sororities and fraternities were all making final plans for their respective parties. A box of gifts bound for Ripton were being packed in Battell Center; more gifts were being wrapped and a tree trimmed in some sorority rooms; toys and clothing were being gathered and purchased; carols were being sung and goodies were also being made, judging by aromas streaming forth from ovens.

Toy missiles, dolls, blouses, pants and food gifts are all helping to provide a Christmas which might not otherwise come. Even Santa Claus is managing to make his appearance in many places. Wandering downtown we saw him driving

ECPO Elect Gordon Perine To Executive Committee

Gordon Perine, director of alumni relations and placement, was recently elected to the executive committee of the Eastern College Personnel Officers. He has been elected to a two-year term.

Members of the ECPO are personnel directors from industry in the northeastern United States, as well as placement officers from colleges in this section. The entire organization meets once a year to discuss the problems of recruiting from the standpoints of the colleges, industries and students. At the present time there are 142 members from colleges and 138 from industry. There are now 40 applicants for membership from industry under consideration by the executive committee.

Value of Meetings

Perine remarked that the value of his attending the meetings "is to meet personnel men who do not visit Middlebury. I can then recommend seniors or young alumni to the various companies."

At the 1959 meeting, held earlier this month, one part of the program was a panel discussion of what the student wants to know when being interviewed by a company for a job. The panel consisted of three 1959 college graduates and two college students from the class of 1960. They represented Simmons College, Tufts University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Harvard University and Boston University.

From their discussion, company representatives were able to get a better idea about what students want to learn during an interview. Generally, students want to know more facts about the company itself and especially what jobs are available. They also desired that company brochures be more factual, and less used as a selling piece for the particular company. Perine believes that a major part of the 1960 meeting will be spent discussing this aspect of college recruiting.

The meeting also gave company recruiters a chance to air any complaints against college placement officers or students themselves. The main complaint was that many students come into an interview knowing almost nothing, or very little, about the company involved. Perine says that this is "inexcusable" because there is literature available on most of the companies and the jobs offered.

To help avoid these problems, The College Placement Council, Inc., in conjunction with the ECPO, has published a pamphlet entitled "The Principles and Practices of College Recruiting." The pamphlet lists the responsibilities of the employer, the college and the student in recruiting.

Copies of this pamphlet are available to all seniors in the placement office.

Hungarians Looked for American Intervention Through United Nations

When their food had run out, they waited for the morning sun to tell them which way was west, but when dawn broke there was a heavy fog. Susan's father took a chance and asked a farm boy where they were. It was then they learned that they were safe.

Had the decision to leave been left to her, Susan said, she would have stayed, because after the effort, triumph and defeat of the Revolution, it seemed somehow unpatriotic to leave.

Sail for America

The Baloghs stayed at a camp in Austria for a few days and then with relatives. A month later they sailed for America to stay with friends here. Susan was accepted from the beginning by classmates at the Fox Hollow School, although her lack of English kept her from making friends for a while. She is happy here now and considers herself "more fortunate than her friends still in Hungary and those who emigrated to other countries."

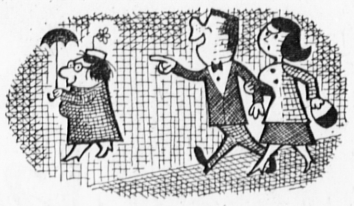
Dear Dr. Frood: My roommate continually steals my Luckies. What should I do?
Sinned Against

Dear Sinned Against: The most successful defense is the traditional African one. Mold a small wax image of your roommate. Then, at full moon, insert half a dozen common household pins into the hands of the image.



Dear Dr. Frood: I was out with my girl and I saw this old lady and I laughed and I said, "Did you ever see such a worn-out old hag?" and my girl told me it was her mother. What can I do now?
Outspoken

Dear Outspoken: Take your left foot in your right hand and jerk sharply until it comes out of your mouth.

Dear Alumni Pres.:

Dear Lovely:
I'll say anything you want me to.

Dear Dr. Frood: I told my fiancée we can't afford to get married until I finish college. She insists that two can live as cheaply as one. Is this true?

Dear Dubious:
Yes. If they take turns eating.

DR. FROOD ON HARASSING HABITS OF ROOMMATES

Roommates resent these common faults in roommates: Staring at my girl's picture. Not staring at my girl's picture. Studying when I'm not. Having a homely sister. Having no sister at all. Only one thing is more annoying than having a roommate who always runs out of Luckies: Having a roommate who doesn't smoke Luckies.

COLLEGE STUDENTS SMOKE MORE LUCKIES THAN ANY OTHER REGULAR!

by (no snow) on his way to the Community House, practicing a hearty laugh as he went.

IN PAST YEARS the Christmas spirit almost undid some efforts. Thinking they would like to help more than one family, one group chose two — and found included in those two families ten children. Santa Claus had weary knees that afternoon, but not even that could detract from the joy of those giving and those receiving.

Literally everyone is getting into this spirit. It was emanating not only on campus but all through town. Miss Lane at the Community House was devoting all her energies, as she does each year, to this work; and downtown many of the merchants were helping the students in choosing and purchasing gifts with advice and friendliness which added to the happy spirit. Their own project, Santa's Treasure Chest, is also providing much seasonal happiness to both Town and Gown, we might add.

This all adds up to a very interesting observation: although this is a busy week academically for everyone on campus, many people still are able to give time to help other people. The spirit is all over; it is not centered in one small area as oftens happens here at Middlebury. It is perhaps appropriate that one of the few unifying campus projects comes at this time of year. To many this giving to others is the real value of the season, trite as it may sound to some diehard skeptics.

In closing we are hopeful (still in our idealistic state) that this spirit will carry through the final Friday night parties of quite a different nature and over into all our own personal holidays at home.

NATIONAL DISGRACE

Thomas C. Mendenhall, newly inaugurated president of Smith College, last week termed the dropping out of women from American colleges before graduation "a national disgrace."

In a speech delivered at inauguration ceremonies, Mendenhall estimated that the women's drop-out probably approached 60 percent in some schools and 20 to 30 percent in schools comparable to Smith.

Referring to the recent comment by Premier Nikita Khruscher before a group of college women that the first purpose of college is "to find a husband," Mendenhall noted that "a wasteful confusion prevails over the purpose of a college education."

Elizabeth B. Kelly, dean of women, pointed out that the drop-out rate at Middlebury is below Mendenhall's estimates.

Off The Boards

by John Kerney, Jr.

. . . The winter teams at Middlebury College are off to a fast start. The hockey team was impressive in both their first defeat and win. The basketball team has surprised a great many people with their fine showing against Union and Northeastern. Things didn't go so well against Tufts at Medford on Saturday night, but the score was a lot closer than it ever was last year.

. . .Both teams will participate in contests during the Christmas holidays in the Boston area. The basketball team will make a return appearance at Springfield College's Invitation Tournament. Last year, Middlebury finished dead last. However, this year their chances are much brighter. With a lucky draw in the first round, the Panthers could finish as high as fourth place. Otherwise, they have the inside track for the consolation prize, which is a great improvement over last year.

. . .The hockey team will play at Memorial Fieldhouse against a strong Loyola College team on Saturday night before packing up for a two-game Boston trip. At the Arena, Middlebury will face a Northeastern team that has already beaten Yale, the Panther's opponents last night at New Haven, and is spearheaded by All-American candidate Art Chisholm. The next night at Harvard the Blue sextet takes on Tufts, the third new opponent played thus far this season. Middlebury will return to action at Memorial Fieldhouse on Jan. 9 against the St. Nick's Hockey team, consisting of college graduates who think they are living in the past. The cast is directed by Pete Bostwick, '58.

. . .The crowds at the home games thus far have exceeded any attempts made last year. The Union basketball game saw about a three-quarter capacity crowd cheer Middlebury on to victory. This was greater than at any point during the last two years. The two hockey crowds have been astounding. The Clarkson game drew close to 1,100 enthusiastic spectators, including seven twelfths of the student body. Although the crowd was a little slow in mounting for the Macdonald game, looking from the inside out it appeared that there wasn't an empty seat or standing spot by the time that contest came to its delayed end. Carnival crowds aren't even that big!

. . .Looking at the box scores, Ken Stone is out in front of the rest of his teammates in scoring with steady performances. In hockey, only three players have hit the scoring column with goals, although the assists count just as much. Phil Latrielle leads the pucksters with seven goals, with Freshman Dates Fryberger close on his heels with five goals. The other Panther tally was by Bob Fryberger against Clarkson.

Pucksters and Quintet Break Even In First Week's Contests

Sextet Downs Macdonald; Knights Win

By CORKY ALLEN

Last Thursday night, the Panther hockey team was downed by Clarkson 9-6 after taking a 6-5 lead in the third period. The Middlebury edge was wiped away by a fast four goal attack mainly because of Middlebury penalties. The Golden Knights from Potsdam, New York are one of the top teams in the East and last week they certainly proved their reputation. Because it had already played three games plus several practice scrimmages, Clarkson had the edge in early experience, but this was balanced by the Panther's determination to win their first game from Clarkson in 27 years.

In the first period, Midd was held scoreless, while Clarkson banged two goals past goalie Chuck Gately, but in the second frame, the Panthers were put back into the game on two goals by All American Phil Latreille and one by forward Bob Fryberger. Dick Morrison and Keith Dollar assisted on Latrielle's goal with Freshman Dates Fryberger assisting brother Bob. This broke Latreille's previous no-goal jinx against Clarkson. The Engineers scored two more tallies during the second period to hold a slim 4-3 lead going into the third period.

Lead Diminishes

Early in the last period, Latreille, with assists from Tor Hultgreen and Dollar, and Dates Fryberger, assisted by his two brothers put Middlebury in the lead for the first time. Ken Gardner of Clarkson tied the count at 5-5 a few minutes later while a Middlebury player was in the penalty box. Latreille put the Panthers ahead once again with an unassisted score, but after this, several Panther penalties really put the pressure on our defense and it just couldn't handle it. Sparked by Gardner, the Golden Knights scored four quick goals before Middlebury could recover and thus wrapped up the game.

The penalties really hurt Midd as five goals were scored against the Panthers when there was a man off the ice. Without the penalties, Middlebury might have come through with an upset. Freshman Dates Fryberger, Ed Germond and Barry White looked good while on the ice, and returnee Keith Dollar played a great game at defense.

Last Saturday, in a game marked by high scoring, rough playing and some fighting, Middlebury whipped Macdonald College of Montreal, 7-3. During the first two periods, the score was fairly close, but in the third frame, the Panthers broke it open for their first victory of the young season.

Dates Fryberger started it off in the second period unassisted. This was followed by a Latreille goal from Dollar and Germond. All seven goals of the game were scored by Dates Fryberger and Latreille, with Fryberger getting four of them, and Latreille getting his second three-goal hat trick in as many games. Had it not been for the many penalties and the tremendous goaltending of visitor Harold Hansen, the game would have been broken open much sooner than the third period. Because of the fast pace of the game, tempers flared often and eventually a player from each team was banned from the game. Goalie Hansen put on one of best exhibitions of netminding seen here in a long time. On several occasions be stopped solo rushes and, in doing so, kept Macdonald in the game. Finally in the last frame, the younger Fryberger put on an amazing show with his tricky stickhandling and scoring. Tor Hultgreen, Latreille and older brother Jerry received assists on his last three goals.

During this last game, the Middlebury team was hit with a major penalty and nine minors for a total of twenty-three minutes. This means that the Panthers were short-handed for more than one of the three periods. A similar amount of time in the penalty box against Clarkson proved to be the margin of victory.

Frosh Hoopsters Lose To Union As Santos Nets 43

A tremendous all around effort by Dave Santos carried the Union Frosh to a slim one point victory over the Middlebury counterparts at the Memorial Field House. Santos made most of his 43 points on deadly outside jump shots and led his team in rebounds and assists.

Typical freshman inexperience and first game nervousness were evident at both ends of the court. Ball handling was sloppy and the players looked ill at ease. The exception was Santos, who compensated for the rest of the team with his brilliant playing. He carried them to a 36-30 lead at the half.

Close Second Half

The Panthers settled down in the second half and almost retrieved a victory. Led by Jim Woods and Craig Stewart their shooting and defense greatly improved. However, time after time, just as they appeared to be getting the lead, Santos would score clutch baskets and Union would again move out of reach.

Besides Santos, who led all scorers with 43 points, Art Frigo tallied 13 points for the winners. Stewart and Woods scored 22 and 17 respectively to pace the losers.

Though it is unfair to discount Santos' performance, it must nevertheless be said that the Middlebury freshmen are capable of putting on a much better show than was witnessed in their initial effort. The improvement noted in the second half of the game will undoubtedly continue throughout the rest of the season.

Publicity Keeps College in the News

By ANNE BEISER

"Middlebury College? Where's that? Never heard of it."

Remarks like these, familiar to so many Middlebury students, are the chief concern of the College News Service Office, under Joseph L. Presbrey, Jr., editor, and Mrs. Margaret D. Smith, assistant editor and office manager. Their job is to keep the outside world informed of events at Middlebury.

Each freshman and transferee fills out a form during registration giving the name and address of his hometown newspaper and a list of the activities in which he participated during high school. These forms are kept on file in the News Service office on the top floor of Old Chapel.

Whenever any Middlebury student or faculty member receives an award, is elected to a position, or takes part in some unusual activity, News Services starts to work. The person's file is located, and a letter called "Hometown News" is typed up and sent to the hometown paper. Special events

Sometimes a timely tip to a newspaper or magazine will bring photographers and reporters to Middlebury to do a special article, such as the story in the Russian-language magazine, "Amerika" on the Bread Loaf Language Summer School. Recently, "Mademoiselle" carried an article on a Middlebury graduate now working with a space research commission in Washington, commending Middlebury's mathematics department for her excellent preparation.

Hockey Faces 6 New Teams

This year Middlebury has added six new teams to its hockey schedule while dropping three others. The new ones are Colgate, Tufts, Loyola, A. I. C., Macdonald and St. Nick's.

Colgate has just started intercollegiate hockey this year after a nine year lapse. The university suspended hockey in 1951 because of inability to hold natural ice on an outdoor rink, but now this problem has been solved by the completion of the William A. Reid Athletic Center. The last two years, the Red Raiders have had an unofficial team and now, under the coaching of Ole Kollevoll, one of Colgate's all time hockey greats of the 1940's, Colgate will have a thirteen game schedule this winter.

Loyola College of Montreal is bound to give the Panthers trouble as might American International College from Springfield, Mass., and Tufts University from the Boston area. St. Nick's is an amateur team from New York that is composed of former college greats, including Middlebury's Pete Bostwick.

Sports in Shorts

Two Middlebury volleyball teams traveled to UVM on Saturday to participate in Vermont's fall Sports Day. Two UVM teams, one each from Plattsburg and Castleton, and the Midd Blue and White teams participated in a round-robin tournament. The matches were played on a 2 out of 3 game basis.

Middlebury Blue made a clean sweep shutting out Castleton and UVM Gold by winning the first two games of each match, and defeating Plattsburg 2-1. Middlebury White won one of its three matches, blanking UVM Green 2-0, and losing to UVM Gold and Plattsburg State 2-1.

Midd Undefeated

The Middlebury Blue team, undefeated for the day, won the volleyball tournament. Members of the winning 6-player team were: Gail Bonhag, Penny Stout, Helle Thomsen, and Wendy Wardwell, all '62, Pat Moore and Carol Nieter, both '63. Miss Catherine Green of the Physical Education Department coached the two Middlebury teams and accompanied them to UVM.

Jan Timmerman '62, manager of badminton, has set up a badminton elimination tourney for women's singles, doubles and mixed doubles. Twenty-one are participating in the singles and twenty-two in the doubles.

Rand Leads Panthers To 2-2 Record

The 1959 Middlebury basketball team is off to a fast start as they have won two of four games in their first week of competition. This equals their total number of victories for last year's campaign. They have a chance to go above the .500 mark tonight as they take on St. Michael's College at Memorial Field House at 8:15.

After successfully completing three pre-season scrimmages, the Panthers opened their official season with a second half victory over Union, 69-65, before a large home crowd. The noisy crowd helped Bill Dyson and Charlie Rand led the team out of a first half deficit, 33-39.

Rand Hits

Center Rand scored four field goals and sunk six foul shots in the second half of the game and was high scorer for the night with twenty-two points. Freshman Dyson was next with a total of eighteen, all on field goals.

On Friday, Dec. 4, at Boston, Middlebury contained Northeastern University in its second half attempt for a victory and won its second game, 72-71. The Panthers led at half time by eleven points, but NU closed the gap in the final minutes of play and just missed catching Middlebury as the game drew to a close. Forward Dvorchek had twenty-five points for the losers, while Co-capt. Howie Wiley was high man for Middlebury with twenty-one. Rand had nineteen and freshman Ken Stone had seventeen. Middlebury hit for 42 percent from the floor in the first half, but only made 8 out of 33 attempts in the second half.

Close Losses

The next night saw Middlebury take on Tufts at Medford, Mass. The Panthers were not as sharp as they had been in their two previous victories and fell down before a weak Tufts' team by a score of 67-65. The field goal percentage was poor and high scorer was Stone with eighteen. Tuft's guard O'Leary pumped in twenty-five for the winners.

On Monday night, the Middlebury cagemen returned home to face a strong St. Lawrence quintet that had beaten UVM by twenty-five points. Although Middlebury led at the half, 33-32, the Larries came on strong the second half and the final score was St. Lawrence 71, Middlebury 61. High scorer for the home forces was Stone with twenty, while Wiley contributed seven field goals and five fouls to the losing cause.

Barenborg, Butler Put on N. E. Squad

The 1959 All-New England football team was chosen last week and, although Middlebury did not place anyone on the first or second teams, Bill Butler, Captain-elect, and Dave Barenborg were given honorable mention.

Butler was key man in the Middlebury defense as signal caller from his linebacker position and was also center on offense. Butler hails from Summit, New Jersey where he attended Summit High School.

Barenborg was most instrumental in the Panther offensive attack from his halfback position. The speedy halfback is from Murray Hill, New Jersey and also played at Summit High School.

Hail to the Downy Snowflake

By RUTH GODDARD

Winter is cummen in, and the lives of students must inexorably adjust themselves to their new surroundings. When Any Middlebury Boy (call him AMB for short) goes out in the morning to his eight o'clock, he realizes that something is missing. Some familiar sound is gone— what is it?

Then suddenly he knows — the patter of little raindrops has ceased, and with them all the other familiar sounds. No longer do soaked sneakers gurgle with water after having traversed the sludgy, squdgy campus. No longer is there a scream and a splash as some unsuspecting student disappears in a puddle.

No, now there are winter sounds. Instead of a scream and a splash there is a scream and a thump as the same unsuspecting student hits a frozen puddle. There are sniffings and coughs and sneezes. There is a great deal of hot air wasted as people try to warm fingers by blowing on them. AMB draws a sage conclusion — it is cold out.

Clumping Along

He goes back inside for his fur-lined boots, his quilted coat, his muffler and his gloves. Then he departs for class, clumping along in his heavy boots. They weight so much that he can't lift his feet very high, and he sways drunkenly along like a weighted punching bag.

He notices several new things about the campus. For one thing, raccoons have appeared once more. These are not the usual variety that appear in the woods, however. They are bigger, their skins are ragged and torn, their paws generally have mittens on them and their furry heads are covered with ear muffs. They usually are not nocturnal creatures (although there are many exceptions and their call is a gutteral "Morning." They are self-satisfied creatures, for they know that they are better off than their fellow denizens of the halls of higher learning.

Our hero also notices that tennis rackets have given way to ice skates, sneakers to leather boots, and windblown tresses to scarfed heads. Red noses and watery eyes have again put in an appearance (more than an appearance, unfortunately, since they intend to stay some three or four months.)

Time for Hockey and Skiing

By the time AMB has got to class, stamped his feet several times, taken off his steaming glasses and warmed his hands, he is used to the idea of winter. Winter, after all, means two things — hockey and skiing. The former is played by a few skilled skaters, the latter by several hundred unskilled skiers. The hockey rink will soon echo to screams of excitement and enthusiasm while the ski slopes will reverberate the screams of agony. The great common denominator of both sports is that everybody is an expert.

Even though our man has done nothing more than waver along on two skates with his ankles knocking together, he feels perfectly qualified to scoff at the way the goalie missed the puck. And though he has done nothing more than sit on his skis going down the slopes while wildly waving his poles, he is still able to criticize the form of the jumpers.

Only One Advantage

Winter is a rare season, all right, especially after the snow comes. Before it comes winter still retains one advantage — the mud is frozen and can be walked on. This is the only time of the year that one does not have to use the walks and not run the danger of emerging from the mud looking like a disgruntled Channel swimmer.

AT CROSSROADS

"The RPI fraternity system is at a crossroads. At stake is the concept of fraternity self-government, and the immediate area of this all-but-hidden battle is Hell Week regulations," begins an editorial which appeared recently in the Rensselaer Polytechnic.

The editorial explained that the problem arose, not by the "anarchy of the Hell Week situation itself," but by the "irresponsible actions of a few fraternities."

The Interfraternity Council at RPI has proposed a plan which may eliminate the problem: "All Hell Week activities must take place within the house and pledges must have at least six hours of uninterrupted sleep and three hours of study each night."

Test Set For New Teachers

The National Teacher Examinations, prepared and administered annually by Educational Testing Service, will be given at 169 testing centers throughout the United States Saturday, Feb. 13, 1960.

At the one-day testing session a candidate may take the Common Examinations, which include tests in professional information, general culture, English expression and non-verbal reasoning, and one or two of 12 optional examinations designed to demonstrate mastery of subject matter to be taught. The college which a candidate is attending, or the school system in which he is seeking employment, will advise him whether he should take the National Teacher Examinations and which of the optional examinations to select.

A bulletin of information (in which an application is inserted) describing registration procedures may be obtained from College officials, school superintendents or directly from the National Teacher Examinations, Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J.

of such a good fraternity system are obvious. Approximately 70 per cent of the male student body are members of fraternities. What about the other 30 per cent? Social scientists will tell you that man has a need to belong. He has to be a part of the order to which he is subjected. Without such companionship, without the opportunity for adequate recreation and so many other opportunities offered by the fraternity organization, college life is relatively empty. As a member of that 30 per cent "looking in from the outside," I can see the advantages that fraternity members can also see. But, I can also see the disadvantages, often more clearly than those on the "inside." The College is aware of both the disadvantages and the advantages of the system. It is obvious that the College thinks the advantages outweigh the disadvantages, which fact is probably true. I am sure that the fraternities are also aware of existing faults which accompany their organization. But being aware of a situation does not change it. I think the disadvantages are becoming more acute, and changes may be in order. I hope these changes are not as drastic as some which have already been made at other colleges. On the contrary, I hope and believe that the change will be in the direction of a higher membership and increased support of such a system so that all of us can enjoy the full benefits of college life, so great a part of which is supplied by fraternities.

Christmas vacation was almost here, and the students were finishing their shopping at The Vermont Book Shop. It was a pleasant afternoon, with the crisp white snow outside, and crisp green bills in the cash register — one of those days that makes Dike Blair, the genial prop. of this fine store, feel good.

The Vermont Book Shop usually is a quiet place, with customers reading and cogitating, but today it was Bedlam. One student was reading aloud Dickens' "Christmas Carol" to an admiring group, while another was trying to recite "The Night Before Christmas" to everyone at large:

" 'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house,
Not a creature was stirring, I guess they were . . ."

(loud shouts drowned him out at this point, but apparently he was trying to rhyme "soused" with "house", a poor rhyme at best.)

A group of gnomes in the dank cellar were busily wrapping packages to be mailed as Christmas presents, which is one reason so many students buy their gifts the year round at The Vermont Book Shop: they will be wrapped in very handsome green paper, and mailed for them.

"When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter,
I sprang from my bed to see what was the matter.
Away to the window I flew like a flash,
Tore open the shutters, and fell out with a crash."

Mr. Blair was waiting on some people who had driven down from Burlington to do their Christmas shopping here (people do that, you know, so great is the fame of The Vermont Book Shop), and was stacking books for them to a great height.

"He was dressed fit to kill, from his head, to his foot,
And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot;
A bundle of books he had flung on his back,
And he looked like a peddler just opening his pack.
The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke it encircled his head like a wreath;
He had a large nose and a little round belly,
That shook when he laughed like a bowlful of jelly.
When he sold me a book, it was done with a flair,
I knew in a moment this must be Dike Blair!"

"Come, come, this is ridiculous!" spluttered Mr. Blair. "However, it does give me a chance to wish all the students a very Merry Christmas, and a very Happy New Year! See you in January! Bring back lots of money!"
